

Executive Bio

Jennifer Corbin, President

Jennifer Corbin is one of the pioneers in the professional coaching industry. Before launching her coaching career in 1995, Jennifer was involved in large law firms in management, training and technology. On the side, starting at the age of 18, Jennifer had created several businesses that had hit a brick wall – but she learned a lot. In 1995, Jennifer decided to become the person that entrepreneurs went to when they hit a brick wall. In 1996, she learned that it was called coaching and began "officially" coaching some attorneys, at their urging, who were launching new projects. At the time, there were fewer than 500 coaches in the world.

Ms. Corbin received her formal training from Coach U and started working for Coach U in 1996 as its first employee. Jennifer has been instrumental in the growth of the company from its conceptual stage to now, generating several million dollars in annual revenue. Jennifer attributes her successful track record in the field of coaching, coach training, business administration and marketing to taking creative and unconventional approaches while fully using common sense, intuition, integrity and systems experiences. Today, she is President and COO of CoachInc.com. CoachInc.com has trained over 26,000 coaches and managers around the globe.

Jennifer is an internationally known speaker, co-“authored” three coach training books published by John Wiley & Sons under the Coach U name, and is a Professional Certified Coach. Jennifer was the first president of the Chicagoland Chapter of the International Coach Federation (ICF). She lives in the State of Washington and is a hiking enthusiast and avid reader.
